ORDER

SUBJECT: Setting up of a Panel to study economies in construction programmes.

No. PC/Constn/Plan/6/3/65.—Construction programmes are inter-woven in a large measure in all sectors of development—be it housing, transport, industry, irrigation, power, agriculture, education or health.

2. Some of the prevailing methods are outmoded, some designs are over-burdened with safety factors, and there are other design criteria which in the light of newer techniques and methodologies, could be rationalised. There is scope for higher productivity in the manufacture of building materials and also for the introduction and promotion of some new materials. There is also considerable room for improvement in the organisational and administrative side dealing with the whole field of construction finance, credit systems, organisation and administrative procedures of public works departments, types of contracts and methods of accounting and payment.

3. Since the Fourth and successive Plans will carry sizable component of construction, economies in construction costs will be of significance in relieving the strain on Nation's resources and in assisting large development programmes. The Planning Commission has accordingly decided to set up a high level technical Panel to advise on this subject. The Panel has been constituted as under :
